

Contents

Preface.	vii
------------------	-----

PART I: The Argument

Thesis	2
1 The curious case of Nefertari's head	5
2 The Cultural Heritage Crusade.	11
3 The nineteenth-century legacy	24
4 The beginnings of an answer – survival and value	36
5 The countries-of-origin argument	49
6 A confusion of claims, and a working principle	56

PART II: The Support

7 How can modern cultures 'inherit' the past?	74
8 ...and how can modern nations?	90
9 Only by manipulation and bad faith	99
10 Has private property failed antiquity?	121
11 ...and has the market?	139
12 The problem of Islam.	152

PART III: The Proof

13 And then there's Egypt.	174
14 Why aren't the Egyptians object-minded?	185
15 The effects of prohibition	194
16 The black market in Egypt.	205
17 The Egyptian authorities are involved	225
18 The real threat to Egyptian monuments	244
19 The politics of conservation	267
20 But archaeology is a safe pair of hands. Isn't it?	286
21 Uncomfortable conclusions	297
22 Postscript and political malice.	308
Appendix.	341
Bibliography.	370
Index	371