

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Permissions	xi
Introduction: More than a Name	1
Life and Education	1
Approaching Collingwood	5
The Shape of this Book.	9
I. History in Peril.	13
Handbook for History Teachers	14
Educational Objectives for the Study of History.	16
Schools Council History Projects	18
GCSE and the National Criteria for History	27
History in the National Curriculum.	35
Afterglow	42
II. Sympathy, Empathy or Re-enactment?	47
Sympathy	48
Empathy	50
Collingwood and 'Re-enactment'	52
'Inside' and 'Outside' and 'Same Thought'.	56
Collingwood and Wittgenstein on Mind and Language	61
Re-enactment: A Conceptual View	66
Mere Semantics?	71
III. The Subject-matter of History	73
Unreasonable Activities	75
Emotions	78
Non-specified Historical Agents	80
Non-Human Animals.	82
Presuppositions and Philosophy	85
Constellations, Paradigms, Epistêmês and Archives	90
Reconsiderations of Philosophy	93

The Widening Lens	97
IV. Theories of Imagination and Historical Imagination	99
Imagination as 'Appearances'	100
The 'Jabbering' Servant	102
The Particulars and Pleasures of the Imagination	104
'Blind, but Indispensable Function'	106
The Romantic Imagination	109
'King without a Country'	110
Psychological Research	112
The Labyrinth of Mirrors	113
The Form of the Content: A Metareflection	116
The Historical Imagination	117
Historical Imagination and Understanding	118
Historical Imagination and Connection	121
Historical Imagination and Literary Style	123
Historical Imagination and Innovation	125
The Historical Imagination of Historical Imagination Scholars	126
V. Collingwood's Historical Imagination	129
Imagination and Historical Imagination	129
A Priori	132
A Priori Historical Imagination	135
The Content and the Form	145
Historical Imagination as Imagination	153
What is the Historical Imagination?	154
VI. 'How Good an Historian Shall I Be?':
Imagination and Education	155
Collingwood on Education	156
The Aims of Education	157
The Self	158
Education and the Development of Self-Knowledge	161
The Curriculum	163
The Organisation of Education	171
Simply Another Idealist?	178
Questions	179
The Historical Imagination of R. G. Collingwood	182
VII. Towards an Historical Education	185
Hirst and the Forms of Knowledge	186
Bloom and the Taxonomy of Educational Objectives	190
Bruner and the Process of Education	194

Historicizing Education	196
Imagination and Education	198
National and Supranational Curricula	200
Why Collingwood?	202
Conclusion: Beyond the Academy	203
Bibliography	207
Index	229