

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Abbreviations	x
Chapter I Introduction: A Unique Voice
I.1 Oakeshott on Politics, History and Philosophy	1
I.2 The Structure of Chapters	6
Chapter II The Enlightenment Positions
II.1 Introduction: Philosophy Par Excellence	11
II.2 Philosophical Modernity	15
II.2.1 Science and Knowledge Proper	15
II.2.2 The Invention of the Mind	18
II.2.3 A Synthesis of Subjectivity and Objectivity	20
II.2.4 The Superiority of Universal Reason	24
II.2.5 Foundationalism in Philosophy	26
II.3 Liberal Ethics	27
II.3.1 Liberal Elements	27
II.3.2 Locke: The Natural Right Theory	29
II.3.3 Kant: The Categorical Imperative	32
II.3.4 Mill: The Utilitarian Principle	39
II.3.5 Formalism in Ethics	44
II.3.6 The Crisis of Enlightenment Ethical Position	45
II.4 Positivist Historiography	48
II.4.1 History, the Past and Historiography	48
II.4.2 The Naturalised Conception of History	53
II.4.3 Neo-Positivism and Modern Philosophy	59
II.4.4 Popper and Hempel: Scientific History	63
II.4.5 Naturalism in Historiography	66
II.4.6 The Problems of Enlightenment Historical Position	68

Chapter III Philosophy and Modes of Experience

III.1 Introduction: Some Interpretative Problems	71
III.2 The Aim and Background of the Work	74
III.2.1 The Aim of the Work	74
III.2.2 Bradley (I): Appearance and Reality	78
III.2.3 The Absolute and the Hierarchy	84
III.3 Experience and Modality	88
III.3.1 Experience: A Single Whole	89
III.3.2 Truth: A Condition of Thought	93
III.3.3 Reality: The Given in Experience	95
III.3.4 Modality: Three Characteristics	99
III.4 The Nature of Philosophy	102
III.4.1 Self-Independence	102
III.4.2 Self-Limitation	106
III.4.3 Scepticism	114
III.4.4 Rorty: The End to Philosophy	119
III.5 The Mode of Practice	123
III.5.1 Practice as a World of Ideas	123
III.5.2 The Conditions of the Practical World	125
III.5.3 Ethics as Pseudo-Philosophy	129

Chapter IV A Sceptical Philosophy of Politics

IV.1 Introduction: From Truth to Rationality	131
IV.2 Rationalism as the Enlightenment Project	134
IV.2.1 The Character and Pedigree of Rationalism	134
IV.2.2 The Philosophical Foundations of Rationalism	139
IV.2.3 Rationalism and the Predicament of the Enlightenment	144
IV.3 Transcending Rationalism in Philosophy	147
IV.3.1 The Map of Human Activity: Deconstructing Scientism	147
IV.3.2 Rationality: Dissecting Mental Instrumentalism	153
IV.3.3 Tradition: Dissolving a priori Reason	157
IV.4 Reconciling Rationalism in Politics	160
IV.4.1 Philosophy and Practice	160
IV.4.2 Abstract Laws vs. a Way of Living	164
IV.4.3 Radical Individualism vs. Traditionalist Individualism	169

IV.4.4 Formal Argumentation vs. Substantive Conversation	174
IV.4.5 The Politics of Faith and The Politics of Scepticism	179
IV.5 On Human Conduct.	186
IV.5.1 Understanding Human Conduct.	186
IV.5.2 Leviathan and The Nature of Political Philosophy.	190
IV.5.3 Civil Association (I): The Formal Conditions	192
IV.5.4 Civil Association (II): The Political.	200
IV.5.5 The Trimmer: Keeping the Ship on an Even Keel .	204
 Chapter V An Idealistic Defense of History
V.1 Introduction: Beyond Positivism and Historicism	213
V.2 Mind, Time and Historical Experience.	215
V.2.1 History as a Form of Experience	215
V.2.2 Absolute Time and Transcendental Time	220
V.2.3 The Death of the Past and the Survival of Pasts . . .	224
V.3 The Logic of History	228
V.3.1 The Historical Past	228
V.3.2 Fact, Truth and Change in History	235
V.3.3 Historical Explanation	239
V.4 The Autonomy of History	250
V.4.1 History and Other Modes of Understanding	250
V.4.2 History and Philosophy	257
V.5 Non-Historicist Idealism.	261
V.5.1 Collingwood (I): An Overall Review	261
V.5.2 Bradley (II): The Presuppositions of Critical History	264
V.5.3 Collingwood (II): Historicism	266
V.5.4 The Living Past vs. the Dead Past.	270
 Chapter VI Conclusion.	275
 Bibliography	277
Author Index	291
Subject Index.	295